Report on the 14th capacity building webinar on “How to use the WTO Investment Facilitation for Development Agreement to improve the FDI environment”

20 February 2024

The 14th capacity building webinar on “How to use the WTO Investment Facilitation for Development Agreement to improve the FDI environment” took place on 20 February 2024, virtually via zoom and hosted 170 participants online. The webinar was organized in the framework of ITC’s Investment Facilitation for Development project.

The webinar focused on how countries can make use of the WTO Investment Facilitation for Development (IFD) Agreement to develop action plans to improve their investment climates for attracting more foreign direct investment (FDI). It also discussed the role of the IFD Agreement as an instrument to advance domestic efforts to enhance investment facilitation measures. The webinar furthermore addressed technical assistance and capacity building support to be provided to developing and least developed countries to conduct investment facilitation self-assessments and to implement the IFD Agreement.

The webinar was organized to enhance awareness and build capacity of WTO Members regarding the IFD Agreement, the text negotiations of which were finalized in November 2023. The webinar was open to all WTO delegates and government representatives from capitals. It was held under the Chatham House Rule to facilitate open and results-oriented discussions.

The webinar’s programme is annexed to this report.

Summary of the main outcomes of the webinar

1. The WTO Investment Facilitation for Development Agreement and its benefits

Focus: The IFD Agreement aims to create a more transparent, efficient and investment friendly business climate by improving the transparency of measures and streamlining administrative procedures. The objective is to facilitate global FDI flows, to help boost Members' economic growth, particularly in developing and least developed countries, with the overarching goal of fostering sustainable development. The IFD Agreement also seeks to help attract not only more but better, longer-term investment, contributing to achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). For more on the IFD Agreement please click here.
Exclusions: The IFD Agreement does not include provisions on investment liberalization (or market access), investment protection and investor-state dispute settlement.

Key benefits mentioned during the webinar: (i) Through a comprehensive Section on Special and Differential Treatment, the Agreement allows developing and least developed countries to implement the Agreement at their own pace and receive the technical assistance and capacity building support they need to do so. The purpose is to ensure that these countries can fully implement the IFD Agreement and, therefore, reap its full benefits. (ii) Considering economic impacts of the Agreement, a recent study shows empirically gains associated with the implementation of investment facilitation measures. According to this study, the expected global welfare gains derived from implementation range between US$250 and US$1,120 billion. For more on the benefits of the IFD Agreement please click here.

2. Lessons learnt from ongoing investment facilitation (IF) self-assessments

The Philippines Over 30 government agencies as well as the private sector participated in an IF self-assessment workshop. This assessment started in early February with the support of the ITC. The observations from the assessment work shared in the webinar include:

- A strong national partner agency that takes the lead in coordinating the participation of stakeholders is essential. In this case of the Philippines, the Board of Investment (BOI) set up an inter-agency group that comprised over 30 agencies. This group was consulted during the negotiations of the IFD Agreement and participated in the assessment and associated trainings.
- It is important that the lead agency should take ownership of the process by functioning as the focal point, to lead the assessment exercises. This builds in-house expertise for the agency to continue leading investment facilitation efforts in the country after the assessment is completed.
- Pre-assessment training is key. The assessment exercise is not only about information collection, but also about knowledge building on best practices in facilitating FDI, as well as the exchange of information among the participating agencies. This helps generate strategies that are particularly useful in the specific context of the country to enhance investment facilitation efforts.

Ecuador sees the IFD Agreement as supporting its national investment promotion efforts and complementing its work in facilitating FDI. As for Ecuador’s investment facilitation self-assessment, the process took place over a period of 5 to 6 months and involved around 30 national agencies working in investment facilitation related areas. The observations from the assessment work shared in the webinar include:

- It is important to ensure that all relevant agencies participating in the assessment have a sound knowledge on the IFD Agreement and its implications. The Investment Facilitation Self-Assessment Guide can serve as a useful tool in this regard.
The discussions should focus on “needs assessment” rather than “performance assessment”, to ensure that the assessment yields results that reflect gaps and identify implementation needs.

3. An investor’s perspective of the IFD Agreement

Robert Bosch, a company with experience in investing in developing countries, mentioned several insights on the relationship of investor needs and the IFD Agreement as follows:

- If a country is part of the IFD Agreement, it signals to investors that the country is serious in its efforts to improve its investment climate and attract FDI.
- Burdensome procedures, as well as complex rules and regulations, can have a negative impact on investors’ decisions to invest. Making them clearer and more transparent can have significant influence on the locational decisions of foreign investors.
- Ensuring transparency of investment measures and streamlining administrative procedures are desirable, as they save time and costs for investors. This is particularly important for SMEs and MSMEs.
- Digital tools are an important solution that make countries more attractive for investors to set up their businesses.
- Coordination among government agencies greatly facilitates the establishment of investment.
- The requirement to provide the same information to several agencies rather than providing it once leads to high costs and delays in the establishment process, making the country less attractive to investors.
- Single points of contact and one-stop-shops are important to investors.
- Setting up a council or implementation committee to jointly look at what works and what is not working in terms of investment facilitation is crucial, as the actual implementation of investment facilitation measures can have a significant impact on investor confidence.

4. The way forward

The IFD Agreement will be made publicly available on 25 February 2024 through a Joint Ministerial Statement by participants of the Agreement. Participants plan to have the IFD Agreement integrated into the WTO rulebook as soon as possible.

To join the meeting online, kindly click on the link that will be sent to you shortly before 3:00 p.m. CET on 20 February 2024 and follow the instructions.

The webinar will be conducted in English and in an interactive manner; it will allow for questions by participants.

At the 13th World Trade Organization (WTO) Ministerial Conference scheduled for 26-29 February 2024, participants of the Investment Facilitation for Development (IFD) Agreement aim to announce the conclusion of the IFD Agreement. Supported so far by over two-thirds of WTO Members, the IFD Agreement seeks to help countries improve their investment climate and—through various concrete measures—facilitate FDI flows, particularly to developing and least developed countries, with the overarching goal of fostering sustainable development.

This webinar will shed light on how countries can make use of the IFD Agreement to develop action plans to improve their investment climates for attracting more FDI. It will also address more technical aspects, such as the investment facilitation needs assessments and technical assistance support to help developing countries implement the IFD Agreement once it is adopted.

The webinar will particularly focus on two issues:
The role of the IFD Agreement as an instrument to advance domestic efforts to enhance investment facilitation measures to attract more FDI.
- The technical assistance support required by developing countries to implement the IFD Agreement, including support for conducting needs assessments for individual countries.

Thus, the discussion will centre on the following questions:
- Why is the IFD Agreement important for developing and least developed countries to improve their FDI climate and how to request support for needs assessments?
- How can needs assessments contribute to the future implementation of the IFD Agreement?
- How can countries request technical assistance to conduct needs assessments and to implement the Agreement?

We look forward to welcoming you to the webinar!

With kind regards,

Quan Zhao, Senior Programme Manager (Trade Policy), International Trade Centre
Karl P. Sauvant, Senior Fellow, Columbia University, Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment
Matthew Stephenson, Head, Investment and Services, World Economic Forum
